Description (revised)

I am auctioning an ORIGINAL Dalek Extermination Gun used by a Dalek in the 1988 Sylvester McCoy story Remembrance of the Daleks. I bought it at a charity auction held by John Nathan-Turner and the Doctor Who Appreciation Society in 1989 - The charity auction took place at a convention called "A Day at the Forum" which was held at the school used for location filming of Remembrance of the Daleks in Hammersmith, London. I am including a photograph of John Nathan-Turner auctioning the actual gun at the convention as ABSOLUTE PROOF OF AUTHENTICITY (There's an excellent website I have just discovered which documents Doctor Who conventions - www.richardwho.com - If you check out the photos taken on the day you'll see JN-T sneaking a cigarette at the back of the hall - wearing exactly the same clothes as in my photograph). He autographed the photograph for me at a later convention. By comparing the two photographs in my auction listing you will see that the white Dalek gun housing is an addition. I made this myself for display purposes from wood and fibreglass, and it is also included in the auction. The gun slides in and out of the housing comfortably, and so the gun is still exactly as I bought it 18 years ago with no modifications (just a touch of rust!). The inside end of the gun is chard from a pyrotechnic charge used in filming - How cool is that! Insured UK postage will be £15.00. I am happy to post this item internationally, but unless I can find an insured international postal service I'm afraid it must be at the buyer's own risk - in this case I can obtain a "proof of posting" to prove the item has been sent but I cannot accept responsibility for any loss or damage. Please feel free to email me any questions you may have. Items like this don't come up for auction every day – so don't miss this rare chance to get your hands on a genuine, and instantly recognisable piece of Doctor Who's history!! Happy Bidding!!!
